Food for thought

A few reads we've been enjoying

“Productivity gains from teleworking in the post COVID-19 era : How can public policies make it happen?”
The Organisation for Economic Co-operation and Development (OECD) is an international organisation that works to build better policies for better lives.

“Remote working is here to stay – but that doesn't mean the end of offices or city centres” This is an interesting article from "The Conversation" (a daily digest of peer-reviewed articles written from a non-political standpoint)

“The age of the office is over – the future lies in Britain's commuter towns” This article from the Guardian by the (somewhat eccentric) Simon Jenkins looks at the impact of COVID on city centres and suggests the idea of corporate space, of the company building, is in crisis and that the future lies with small towns and suburban villages.
